Quick: Do you use Photoshop? (You'll feel like an expert in no time!) Want to become a pro Photoshop user? Here are a few tips on taking your Photoshop skills to the next level.

Mastering the Basics If you're planning to edit images in any capacity, there are some basics you should learn before you even pick up Photoshop. Learning how to select, duplicate and move your artwork will help you later. After you've mastered these basics, you can start experimenting with other techniques.

Select To select an object, hold down the "Ctrl" key, and click-and-drag over the image. You can also hold down the "C" key to select the entire layer. When you release the mouse button, your selection will appear in a small white box.

Duplicate It may seem simple enough to duplicate an image, but beginners often make mistakes. You can easily copy by selecting an image, placing the "Ctrl" key on your keyboard, and clicking-and-dragging it to a new location. To duplicate an object, hold down the "Ctrl" key, and click-and-drag over the area you want to duplicate.

Move Use the Move tool to apply an image or a layer to a new location in the same document. To make a selection, hold down the "Ctrl" key, and click-and-drag over the image you want to move. You can also hold down the "Shift" key to constrict the selection area. To move an object in your document, hold down the "Ctrl" key, and click-and-drag over the area you want to move.

Resize Use the Image Size dialog box to resize an image. It's easier to use a zoomed-out view (in the Image Size dialog box), but you can also zoom in on the image if you need. The dialog box opens when you select the desired option. To resize the image, choose an option from the Image Size dialog box.

Create Layers You need to be able to see all parts of an image at once to do your work. When you don't, your work will be filled with confusion. Layers give you the ability to do just that by grouping objects together. You can make a selection, apply an adjustment, and then lower the opacity of

Q: To use XMLHttpRequest() or import XMLHttpRequest Which one to use? What are the pro/cons for each? I am working in browser, ASP.NET. A: They are very different. For one thing, XMLHttpRequest is a pure client-side utility while XMLHttpRequest is a core JavaScript API. For another thing, XMLHttpRequest can be disabled in a user's browser settings, while XMLHttpRequest can't. A: XMLHttpRequest is client side, which means that it is always available, once it is loaded, it will always be available. But, it is not that good at performing heavy load, so it's not recommended to use it for performing large task. Import XMLHttpRequest is more of server side technique, which allows you to have a control over how many request you are going to send. It's simple to use API. Thinking back on the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets' come-from-ahead 24-13 win at No. 14 Miami (FL) last Saturday, it's not hard to see how the game turned out the way it did. Georgia Tech quarterback Josh Nesbitt completed 24 of 33 passes for 334 yards and four touchdowns, and the Yellow Jackets' other two quarterbacks didn't have to throw a single ball. During the game, Miami had a hurry-up, no-huddle offense, and if you are a Georgia Tech fan, you remember how much that turned a routine game into a red-zone nightmare when Miami quickly took a 35-13 lead midway through the third quarter. Miami led by seven points in only 34 seconds. Although Georgia Tech came from behind in the second half to beat Miami, it was neither a perfect or a flawless performance by the Yellow Jackets. That's because Georgia Tech spread to much talent on the offensive side of the ball, especially on the ground. The Yellow Jackets' offense was designed around the running game. When the Yellow Jackets had a lead, and they had plenty of them, there were more than enough running backs to beat a defense that is built to stop the run. But Georgia Tech's offensive line can't be blamed for the Yellow Jackets' final 42-14 loss to Georgia. Miami's defense was one of the best in college football against the run last season, so the Yellow Jackets' offensive line shouldn't have much reason to think that things

Yes, but where can i get it? Twins in the North _____? It seems to be associated with the Duroc pigs (genus Sus) and none of the genetic testing I have read about has looked at any significant difference in who was used in domestic vs their ancestors. This is what makes Duroc pigs so interesting from the equine point of view. They look like an Arab on steroids, but are in fact European. Magnet fabrication using melt-spun nanofibers. In this study, we report the fabrication of magnetic nanofibers using melt-spun polymer nanofibers. During spinning, the nanofibers form by a pulling-out of the nanofiber from the rotating spinneret. Achieved magnetic nanofiber diameter was measured by scanning electron microscopy (SEM). The magnetic force arising from an exposed surface charge as well as the magnetic moment of a nanofiber were confirmed by HFM and FT-M. As with the produced glass nanofiber, the nanofiber can be drawn out of the spinneret with a built-in pressure. Thus, if the spinneret consists of a polymer, the nanofiber is obtained using a simple process that does not require the use of a nanomanipulator or a specialized equipment. In addition, a spinneret for melt-spinning polymers can be fabricated by molding of polymer films using a molding process such as the hot stamping process. We present fabrication of a composite nanofiber composed of a magnetic polyacrylonitrile nanofiber and a surrounding polyvinyl pyrrolidone nanofiber.

Q: Something simpler than a rich media map? I have set up a rich media map (see link) with a series of maps and tables showing events. I used the.swf type for the containers, and they have working resize handles. But I have to load the source files of the maps and tables which is quite resource intense, when the map is displayed in full screen mode. This is a quick and simple project that does not need to be ultra-responsive. Is there a way to have the maps and tables refresh faster without having to load the whole file again? A: Flash uses SWF-files to animate (or not, as the case may be). A SWF is mostly
